

PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN OTS AND THE PLANETARY HEALTH ALLIANCE

As part of OTS' ongoing efforts to evolve and diversify our academic offerings, we are excited to share the news of our partnership with the Planetary Health Alliance (PHA). The PHA is co-housed by the Center for the Environment and the T.S Chan School of Public Health, both at Harvard University, with support from the Rockefeller Foundation.

The Planetary Health Alliance is a consortium of over 120 dedicated universities, NGOs, government entities, research institutes, and other partners around the world committed to advancing planetary health. They build collaboration across a broad array of scientific disciplines, as well as with decision-makers, movement builders, and local communities, to build a rigorous evidence base for informing policy solutions aimed at optimizing both human health and environmental stewardship objectives.

With this new partnership, we hope to enhance our worldwide network to drive and support scientific discovery and knowledge towards a new human/environment relationship that is socially equitable and ecologically sustainable.
